New UC Area Plant Pathologist for Sacramento, Yolo, and Solano Counties:

Jenny Broome has transferred into the Sacramento Cooperative Extension office and is now serving Yolo, Solano, and Sacramento Counties as an Area Plant Pathologist. She came to this tri-county position from the Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education Program (SAREP) at UC Davis, after working there for 8 years, the last 5 years as associate director. Jenny comes to this position after receiving a doctorate and a Masters of Science in plant pathology from UC Davis. After completing her doctorate, she worked for several years at the Dept. of Pesticide Regulation as an Environmental Research Scientist before returning to the University.

Jenny is interested in hearing from you about what kinds of plant disease research and education work you would like to see happen in this tri-county area. In her new position she plans to work with farm advisors Rachel Long, Kent Brittan, Gene Miyao, and Mario Moratorio as well as Master Gardener staff and volunteers to provide plant disease diagnosis and management advice as well as develop cooperative research and education programs for key commodities in the Sacramento Valley. She is also interested in assisting organic farmers in the region through developing plant disease management options. For more details and/or to share your thoughts as she develops her new program to serve the tri-county area, please contact her at the UCCE office in Sacramento (916) 875-6421, or her cell phone (530) 681-0216, or email: jcbroome@ucdavis.edu.

Garbanzo Production

When growing garbanzos, plant the ascochyta resistant variety Sierra, and be sure to treat the seed with thiabendazole (Mertect LSP), that's now registered for use in California. When ascochyta symptoms are found on plants (characteristic fungal rings and leaf dieback) treat with either Headline or Quadris (fungicides). In a field trial in Solano Co. in 2006, after a single fungicide application to a garbanzo field for ascochyta control, Headline and Quadris both gave 57-58% disease control, whereas Bravo only gave 34% control. Ascochyta damage to the control plots was 90%.

ALFALFA PRODUCTION

Variety Trial Information: Statewide Alfalfa Variety Trial information can be found on the UC Davis Alfalfa Production Website at: <http://alfalfa.ucdavis.edu>

Overseeding forages in alfalfa: Overseeding is recommended for older or weakened stands to help increase yields. However a mixed stand will result, changing the forage quality, so be sure you know your markets for your hay. More information on overseeding can be obtained from the UC publication "Overseeding and Companion Cropping in Alfalfa", available through our office (pub. number 21594).

LIVING WITH FIRE

In the aftermath of the Dunnigan Hills fire that burned 14,000 acres along with heavy livestock and structural losses, it's important to think about how to stay safe from fire. Following are helpful websites on living with fire:
